LEHMANN'S STABLES ARE DESTROYED

Fire Wipes Out Beautiful New Buildings to Extent of $175,000

ANTIOCH RESPONDS TO CALL

Flames sweeping buildings on the Lake Villa estate of Otto Lehmann, Saturday afternoon, exacted toll of $175,000. The costly new stables and riding academy, nearing completion, were only a mass of smoldering ruins when the volunteer fire brigade had halted the blaze sufficiently to insure safety of nearby buildings.

Defective electric wiring is believed to have started the fire. Before the blaze was discovered, great headway had been gained, and when the alarm was sounded, the stable roof was a sheet of flames.

Antioch's volunteer department responded and made the run in ten minutes, but the flames were well under way and attempts were made only to save other buildings.

Wealthy neighbors of the exclusive Lake Villa colony rallied into a bucket brigade and fought the flames. Only by strenuous efforts of the volunteers was much greater loss averted, as sparks and flying embers ignited roofs of several houses nearby, occupied by Lehmann servants. Only slight damage was occasioned to these homes.

A rescuing squad entered the flaming stables and led Lehmann's string of prize horses to safety. A number of them were in the barns when the fire started.

Actual loss as result of the fire will approximate $150,000, it is estimated, as it is reported that insurance covered only one-seventh of the value of the property destroyed. Mayor Thompson of Chicago and Fred Lundin were among the spectators.

State Bank Robber's Trial Continued for Fifth Time

Trial of John Gilmore, alleged robber of the Antioch State bank, had to be continued for the fifth time Saturday when it was discovered that the main witness for the state, Sam Rosenberg, of Chicago, had disappeared.

Rosenberg, when the case came up last week, claimed to be too ill to attend the trial, declaring that he had a severe attack of appendicitis. The following day he left his home and has been missing ever since, and detectives, the Chicago police and Sheriff Elmer Green have sought in vain for him.

When the case came up Saturday Judge Edwards continued it until March.

Commercial Association Meets Tuesday Evening

The annual meeting of the Commercial association will be held Tuesday evening in the town hall. Election of officers will be held. It is the wish of the officers that every member of the association make every effort to attend as there will be some very important matters to take up and the action of the full membership is desired. Don't forget—Tuesday night.

Drains Gasoline From Automobile; Catches Afire

After draining the gasoline from an automobile on Friday, the thirteenth, L. A. Van Deusen started to look for leak in the mechanism with a lighted match and his clothes became ignited and his hands were burned, although not seriously. An alarm of fire was turned in, but the flames were extinguished before the fire ladders arrived.

Many Auctions Sales Scheduled for January

January will witness quite a few auction sales among which are the following:

Thomas Peterson will sell his property on the farm known as the old Dave Van Patten farm on the Fox Lake road, one-half mile west of Lake Villa. This sale will be held Tuesday, January 24, and the sale bills as published show a large assortment of items to be sold. L. J. Slocum, of Wadsworth, will be the auctioneer and J. E. Brook, clerk. The sale will start at 1 o'clock sharp.

A sale is announced of the property of F. F. Smith, deceased, at the farm located in the village of Salem, Wednesday, January 25. The auctioneer will be L. H. Freeman, C. V. Cook will act as clerk and Wm. Schlect as settling clerk. A. G. Hartnell is administrator.

A sale is announced by Fred Hund of his property on the farm known as the Mrs. Wendt farm, situated two miles northeast of Wadsworth, five miles east of Zion and three miles southeast of Russell on Thursday, January 26, at 11 o'clock sharp. L. J. Slocum will be the auctioneer and J. G. Welch the clerk.

A sale is announced of the property of William Hook on the farm known as the Charles Yopp farm to be held Wednesday, January 25, at 1 o'clock sharp. The farm is located three and one-half miles southwest of Antioch on the Grass Lake road. Walter Chinn, of Antioch, will be the auctioneer and J. E. Brook the clerk.

Parents, Pupils and Teachers to Meet at Libertyville

On Saturday, Jan. 21, 1922, at the auditorium in First National Bank building in Libertyville there will be held a meeting to which the teachers, the older pupils and the parents are invited.

The morning program beginning at 9:45 will consist of talks by Mr. O. M. Schantz of Chicago, president of the Illinois Andobon society and Mr. Wm. I. Lyon of Waukegan, their subjects are related to bird study. Mr. Edmund Hulseberg of LaGrange will entertain with bird calls and bird whistling.

In the afternoon Dr. Caroline Hedger of Chicago and Dr. E. E. Graham of Lake Forest will speak on health subjects.

At both the morning and afternoon sessions many lantern slides will be used to illustrate the talks.

There will be moving picture films for entertainment at different times during the day.

May Delay Small's Trial

A postponement of Governor Small's trial at Waukegan Saturday may be necessitated by serious illness of Vernon C. Curtis' son at home in Grant Park.

If the state insists on going ahead with the case Saturday Governor Small will appear in court when affidavits will be submitted in support of the motion for separated trials for Governor Small and Mr. Curtis. These affidavits were sent to the prosecuting attorneys Wednesday.

"If the state is willing to agree to a brief postponement, I suppose a few days would intervene before we resume the arguments," said C. C. LaForge of defendant counsel. "However, if the state insists, we will proceed Saturday."

Word was received here Wednesday morning of the death of Mrs. N. E. Battridge of Toledo, Ohio. The remains will be brought to Antioch for burial, services will be held from the W. R. Williams residence on Friday at 1:30 p. m.

NO EXCEPTION IS OFFERED TO IMPROVEMENT

Public Hearing Shows Property Owners in Accord for New Road

BOARD TO MEET JAN. 27

The public hearing on the road question Tuesday night brought one of the largest attendance of the season and many points were brought up and straightened out apparently to the satisfaction of all.

Mr. Russell, the county superintendent gave explanations on many points that were not quite clear to some of the property owners and "Gene" Runyard cleared up the legal end of the questions.

After an hour's discussion on the subject, President King asked for objections and none were forthcoming. All told the meeting was a big success and the attitude of those there sensed of full accord on the part of the property owners for the improvement.

Antioch is no doubt taking the biggest step yet toward improvement and her $100,000 improvement plan has received commendation of every paper in the county.

The meeting was adjourned to Friday evening, January 27, at 7 p. m., at which time recommendations for approval of ordinance of specification will be heard.

Sycamore Local Withdraws from Producers' Ass'n

The Sycamore local of the Milk Producers association passed the following resolutions at their meeting Jan. 14th: Sycamore, Ill., Jan. 16, 1922.

Whereas, we the members of the Milk Producers Association of DeKalb County, Illinois, and patrons of the Milk Producers Co-operative Marketing company feel that the attitude of the Milk Producers Association to be antagonistic and detrimental to the said Marketing Company and our own personal interests.

Therefore be it resolved that we withdraw our affiliation with the said Milk Producers Association, and be it further resolved that we do not wish to be represented on its Board of Directors or have any association with them whatever.

Above resolutions adopted unanimously by the members of the Milk Producers Association, January 14th, 1922, of this local.

John Hallett, Pres.
John S. Lendhall, Sec'y.

Lake Villa Elects Officers

The annual meeting of the Lake Villa Local of the Milk Producers Association was held at the Village hall, Lake Villa, Ill., on Tuesday, Jan. 17, 1922, at one o'clock p. m. Election of officers was held.

In the notice sent out for the meeting by the secretary the following notice was attached:

"We are assuming that you have read in the newspapers that there has been a petition filed in U. S. Court to put the Marketing Company in bankruptcy, therefore, if you have any claim against said company, come to the meeting and bring your claim with you."

It is said that the farmers who had claims against the Marketing company did not take any action due to the fact that those not having a ninety day claim against the company would have to return receipts of that time to file claim. Clair Doolittle was the informant of this information, receiving it at a reliable source.

Antioch Local Meets Friday

The annual meeting of the Antioch local of the Milk Producers association will be held Friday, January 20, at the town hall. Election of officers and other important business will be taken up. Be sure and be there.

Horse races on ice at Bangs Lake, near Wauconda, is the latest addition to winter sports and on Saturday, Jan. 21, there will be two events that will attract a large crowd of turf fans, provided the weather man does not turn on the heat and melt the ice.

George White Is Re-Elected Head of Farm Institute

The annual election of officers of the Lake County Farm Institute was held Friday afternoon at Gurnee at the close of a four days session. Geo. White, of Antioch, being re-elected president; Harold Minto, of Antioch, succeeding himself as secretary, and Elliott P. Bacon, of Waukegan, as treasurer, his being a new appointment. John E. Barrett, of Prairie View, was elected township vice president.

The officers elected for the department of Household Science were:

President, Mrs. Vida Henry; secretary, Mrs. Lena Winters.

Delegates to the State Institutes: J. S. Denman and Mrs. Vida Henry.

In the afternoon there was an attendance of about 300, and the afternoon was spent in a business session, including reports of the officers, election and address on "Soil Building," by Brother Leo, and also an address by Mrs. Fulton on "The Farm Woman's Part in Americanization," including questions and informal discussions.

The institute opened Tuesday at Rosecrans, where morning and afternoon and evening sessions were held, and was continued at Round Lake Wednesday with morning and afternoon sessions, with three sessions Thursday at Gurnee.

The institute was one of the most successful ever held and the attendance unusually large. The speakers, experts upon the various topics of interest to agriculturalists and farm wives, gave very helpful information.

County Clerk Issues Data on Elections

County Clerk Lew Hendee has issued a booklet giving complete information on all primaries and elections to be held in the state of Illinois during the year 1922. The pamphlet shows the officers to be nominated at each primary.

20 Years Ago in Antioch

Thursday, January 23, 1902

J. C. James is reported on the sick list.

Eldora Horton was transacting business in Chicago, Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. George Royer, of Pullman, Ill., are visiting at Richard Kayes.

John Wilcox, of Channel, spent Saturday with D. Nelson's.

Mrs. P. H. Grady, of the Munn Hotel, Lake Villa, was an Antioch caller, Friday.

The Armour & Co. ice house at Round Lake is filled and work will soon stop there.

Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Zeigler returned Monday from their three weeks' vacation and report having a delightful time.

Out of nearly two hundred guesses made on the clock at Thayer & Vickers, Mrs. Ernest Clark, of Channel Lake, came the nearest to the correct time it would take before an eight-day clock would run down, her guess being 13 days and 22 hours. The clock ran down in 14 days and 2 hours.

Mrs. August Hanke, of Channel Lake, returned Friday from a visit with her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Copper, of Chicago. Mr. and Mrs. Copper will leave for Mt. Clemens, Mich., Wednesday, January 22, with the intention of improving Mrs. Copper's health.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Powles spent the forepart of the week with his parents at Union Grove.

Miss Addie Schafer has been confined to the house with an abscess in her head, but at this writing is much better.

At Racine, Wis., Tuesday, January 1, 1902, occurred the marriage of John W. Van Patten and Miss Edna Hoyt, both of Antioch. Mr. Van Patten is the oldest son of B. F. Van Patten and Miss Hoyt is the oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hoyt, recently of the firm of Hoyt & Vickers.

$8,000 Blaze Ruins Wauconda Residence

The fine, large residence on the Belcher farm, one and a half miles north of Wauconda was totally destroyed by fire late Saturday afternoon and scores of neighbors were compelled to fight the flames to prevent the spreading of the blaze to other buildings.

The farm is operated by William Fink and is known as the Ben Carpenter place.

Elizabeth, little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fink had emptied some hot ashes near the house and the wind blew a live coal into the straw with which the foundation had been banked to keep out the cold.

The loss was placed at $8,000.

Fire Destroys Buildings on Bristol Farm

Fire completely destroyed the barn and silo on the John Doerflinger farm, two and one-half miles northeast of Bristol, on what is known as the Hansen farm, last Wednesday night, shortly after 10 o'clock. Four horses and twenty-eight head of cattle were consumed in the blaze that burned the barn to the ground, as well as the silo, which was filled to capacity. The horses and cattle were partly covered by insurance, but it is understood the barn and silo carried no insurance.

If You Wish Free Seeds Write Your Congressman

The vegetable and flower seeds distributed by the department of agriculture each year are now ready for free distribution. If you wish vegetable or flower seeds, or both, write to Carl R. Chindblom, Congressman 10th District Illinois, Washington D. C., and the seeds will be sent to you in time for spring planting.

Local Garage Wins Sales Honors

The Antioch Sales and Service company were second on the list of Ford dealers for number of cars sold in the Chicago district for the first 10 days of January. Considering the territory this district covers, to top this list is quite an honor. We hope to see the local concern top the list soon.

WOMAN'S CLUB HEARS TALK ON WELFARE WORK

Mrs. Featherstone Discusses the Cause and Effects of Undernourishment

MOTHERS BENEFIT BY TALK

A large and interested audience met at the club rooms Monday afternoon to hear Mrs. Featherstone of the Child Welfare Work give an address on "The Undernourished Child."

A large delegation of High School pupils were present and their eager attention bespoke their interest.

Undernourishment—particularly as related to the older children—those of high school age—was a fact forcefully and convincingly brought to the attention of the assembled mothers, teachers and high school children.

To quote Mrs. Featherstone—"The child of fourteen years entering high school is carrying a heavy load. Body growth is still going on. The class room work is exacting—His ambition urges him to keep up, his mind is burdened with a complexity of detail and conglomeration of facts. Athletics and the many new social contacts interest and excite him. A many sided life is presented to the child just at a time when great chemical changes are going on within his body. These changes react upon the nervous system and this in turn upon the digestive system, with the result that physical development soon fails to measure up to the recognized standards and the child is unable to carry on his daily program of work and play and at the same time maintain proper physical development."

The symptoms, causes, prevention and cure of undernourishment were all in turn discussed and clearly set forth.

The big outstanding system of undernourishment is fatigue. The way the undernourished child stands is characteristic. The position is always slovenly, with nearly all the weight thrown on one foot. The shoulders droop forward so that the child is hollow chested and round shouldered. The shoulder blades in the back stand out at more or less acute angles from the body. The muscles are soft and flabby. In the very posture of the average high school boy and girl we recognize symptoms of undernourishment.

The essentials of perfect body building are food, rest, work and play combined with plenty of fresh air.

One of the great causes of undernourishment is lack of proper rest.

This may be the result of too late bed time—too much stimulation and emotional excitement—too many movies and not enough rest time during the day.

Lack of proper ventilation in both school and home—over crowded classrooms—too much indoor life—are all things to be looked for and adjusted if we are to give our children a fair chance for health.

Other common causes of undernourishment are the presence of physical defects such as adenoids—enlarged or diseased tonsils, defective vision or decayed teeth.

Prevention was shown to be largely a matter of parental control and proper supervision of the child's habits of life—his food, sleep, work and play. Upon the parents was placed the responsibility of safeguarding the physical development of the children. Much is said as to the duty a child owes his parents but by far the parent owes the greater duty since the child did not ask to be brought here.

See that your child is given not only a sufficient quantity of food but that this food has sufficient food values to sustain the strain put upon the growing body by the active life it leads.

Supply cooked cereals with good milk, vegetables, rich in vitamins—very little meat, coarse breads with plenty of real butter. Abundance of fresh fruit—with milk to drink.

Neither tea nor coffee should be allowed a growing child. They have no food value and acting only as stimulants and heart pumps are not needed by a child.

Insist upon plenty of sleep. In a well ventilated room—at least nine hours out of the twenty-four should be spent in sleep. Wide open windows at night and a nine o'clock bed time, five nights a week was urged if an undernourished

"What other money?"

"That which is sent from across the water for the cause."

"Oh, I see; there is more coming then."

"Coming, yes; maybe some is here already."

"How much did you owe the bank, Wine?"

"Between eight and nine thousand; it is overdue three months; now I promise to pay it all up tomorrow."

"Oh, you did, hey! out of that stuff, I suppose?"

"Were else I get it, you think? Mein Gott, I have no more."

"Say," burst out Waldron suspiciously, "that's all right, but what bothers me is why this girl should hit you for it at just this particular time. Krantz must have sent her, but what made them think you had money now?"

"It ain't very likely they were just takin' a chance, is it? I believe that is all a d—n lie; they haven't got any more coming. Only I do think they imagined you might have some on hand."

"How they imagine that?"

"Search me, Wine; only I happen to know there is a h—l of a lot going on under the surface. It don't look good to me, they jumpin' you just at this time."

"What you mean? You have not spilled nothing?"

"Me!" he laughed roughly. "D—n it, I'm not the spillin' kind. There's been plenty o' fellers after the dope, let me tell you, but I've let 'em hunt. Say, I've had to laugh sometimes the way they've been fooled. You know that guy who called himself Horner?"

"Sure—a smart fellow."

"You bet he is; a d—n sight smarter than you think. He ain't Horner at all, if you ask me; his right name was Harris, as slick a crook as ever lived."

"Harris? a crook? What was it I saw in the paper? Wasn't he the same guy what was croaked last night?"

"You bet he was; that's what I'm telling you about; that's why I come up here to get this off my chest. He biffo this fellow Horner coming over, blew in with all his papers, an' started negotiatin' with Krantz and Alva. He an' Alva got awful thick."

"I know; what was the game?"

"To get that check into cash, of course. He hung around for that purpose for weeks, an' then missed out."

"An' you knew him, an' never said a word?"

"Sure I knew him, first time I got eyes on the blonter; but what was it to me? I ain't in this business for my health, Wine. I never gave a d—n who got hands on that stuff, so I had my grab at it. Harris no! I had it framed; that's why I was out there, waitin' for a signal from him. But when you bent him to it, I'd just as soon be your running mate as him."

"Hush! don't talk so loud! And now you say Harris is dead?"

"As a mackerel; he couldn't be no fender. But that was my house where he was croaked, an' so I got in to get out o' town. The police ain't wise so far, but they might tumble if I hung around."

"That why you come here?"

"Exactly; I've got to have some rino right away, and it's up to you to see that I'm heeled. You know where the stuff is, and how to get it quick."

"I wouldn't dare use that money yet; I haven't even opened the bag."

"The h—l you wouldn't! You are goin' to cop off enough to pay that note tomorrow, ain't you? That's what you promised the girl. Well, I'm just as important as she is, I reckon, and I'm goin' to have my share, you bet, or else I'll make it hot for you—I'll say that."

"You haven't nothing but your own word."

"Ain't I! Say, Wine, don't be a fool; there are others beside us that's got a nose in this affair. There's a saloonkeeper down on Sixth avenue, named Costigan, who's got all o' Harris' dope, an' he's goin' to keep on the trail. Then there's another fellow who's liable to raise h—l. I ain't got him exactly placed yet, but he's the guy that led up to Harris being killed. I'm the only one what knows that, an' I ain't talked before."

"Who is he—a detective?"

"Maybe; Harris called him Severn. They got the guy down into Costigan's and the three of us slugged him. They patched him up, and then locked him into a back room over in my place. The next morning they was goin' to give him the third degree. Then with him safe, Harris went after this girl, thinkin' she would be made to talk. I didn't want to trouble with Harris, ner Costigan either for the matter of that—they're both of 'em bad actors."

"Well, then, what happened?"

"That's mostly guess-work. They had this guy Severn locked in upstairs."

He was unconscious when we dumped him there, and later, when my wife got this girl to come over—they was raised in the same town—Harris he turned the key on her. They was aiming to bring them together the next morning, but somehow Severn must have woke up, an' got out o' the room, for the next thing I know'd he was fightin' Harris out in the hall, an' after that I found the girl had skipped out durin' the fracas."

"They both got away?"

"Clean, leaving Harris behind with his skull busted; deadlier than a door-nail when I got to him."

"And you don't know who this Severn is or what he is up to?"

"No, I don't, Wine, but he's sure got some game on, an' he's got my goat. He's in with the girl all right, and knows too d—n much. That's what makes me leery about her being here pumpte, you."

"She didn't pump me."

"You mean to say the two of you didn't talk about Alva?"

"We talked about him, of course; we couldn't help it, but she never hinted at nothing, and she didn't ask no questions. Only it seems they've found out one thing that ain't been reported by the police—she knew what he was killed with."

"What's that? She told you what stuck him?"

"You bet she did; she had one of 'em herself, an' took it out of her hat, and put it right down here on the desk. I thought for a second I was going to keel over, but she didn't notice, just went on talkin'. How do you suppose she ever found that out?"

"Severn told her, that's how. It was dropped there in the dark. That feller got it some way, and hid it in his valise. That was what made Harris so sure he was in on the job, because he ralded the room at some hotel and found the thing."

"You don't imagine the girl is playin' us?"

"I don't imagine nuthin', but I'm playin' safe. I don't know what the h—l either of them are up to, but I figure they know too d—n much, an' I ain't goin' to take any chances. Hangin' round till they anse out the rest. That's my idea, to skip out while there's some chance to get away. So pony up my share, Wine, an' then you can do whatever you darn please with what's comin' to you. What do you say?"

I could hear the other tramping nervously back and forth across the room. His failure to answer must have angered the Russian, for, after a minute, he burst out with an oath:

"D—n it, why don't yet say something? Part o' this hoodie's mine, ain't it?"

"Yes—of course."

"Well, then, cough it up! Where did you plant the stuff?"

"It's put away in a safety vault," Wine explained, his voice almost falling him. "Honest, Waldron, I can't get it tonight, it's too late. The bank is locked, and I haven't opened it."

"You're a liar! You never dared to lug the thing around! You wouldn't be seen with it in your hand in daylight. I know you, you sneaking cur. You brought the stuff straight to this office that night, and by God, I believe it is here yet. What do you want me to do—kill you, and then hunt? That is what's goin' to happen, unless you come across, too. I'll shake the gizzard out of you, you little sneak, if you try any trick so me."

He must have gripped the other, for there was a struggle, Wine whimpering as though half choked.

"Speak up, you cur! This thing divides fifty-fifty. Where is it now? What's that behind those books? H—l, I wouldn't believe you under oath. Go get it out from there; let's have a look at the stuff."

He must have flung the other clear across the room, for he came down sprawling, his body striking against the door of the closet, behind which I crouched. The catch broke under the impact, and before I could draw back, I was in full view of both men.

CHAPTER XIV.

The Death of a Murderer.

Wine, outstretched on the floor at my very feet, stared up at me, so startled by my sudden appearance as to be speechless. Waldron, oblivious of all else but the money, now almost in his possession, was upon his knees before a bookcase, dragging out the heavy volumes from the low er shelf, dumping them on the floor. From behind these he had already drawn forth into view a black leather valise, when Wine found voice, uttering a strange cry of terror, which caused him to glance about. He leaped to his feet instantly, his eyes glaring into mine, one hand flung back as though in search of a weapon.

I gave him no time. I leaped straight at him, striking so hard even as we grappled that the blow sent him reeling back against the bookcase. He knew me then, and the recognition brought with it a fury which transformed the Russian into a wild beast. As I felt him to do now that he was cornered, with the odds of victory in his very grasp, he became a demon, a mad dog, whose only desire was to kill.

"You're fighting a man this time, yer h—l-hound; not a whiflet like Harris. I'll blow a hole clear through yer! Sneaked in, did ye? Well, ye'll never sneak out again! Say, how do yer like the taste o' that?"

He struck with a knee in the stomach, grunting as I loosened my grip on his beard, and tried to butt into me with lowered head. I caught him instinctively, with a free fist, rocking his head back and cutting a gash in his cheek from which blood spurted. If he possessed any self-control before, he lost it then, crazed with hate and the desire to kill. He was a barroom fighter, bound by no rules, capable of any ferocity—biting, gouging, using hands and feet, a ruthless savage. It was this which defeated him, for while I was neither cool nor clear of mind, I kept my head sufficiently to remember my training and accept every advantage that presented itself; more than that, the very threats with which he tried to goad me were guides to his own action, giving me the swift hint needed for defense.

Realizing Wine was back of me, I managed to whirl the big bulk of the battling Russian about so as to block any surprise attack from the rear. This movement gave me the support of the wall, and, using it as a defense, I resorted to the same tactics adopted by Waldron, assaulting him with feet as well as hands, breaking his strange hold on my throat and forcing him backward, so that a swift kick sent the fellow stumbling over a pile of books, clawing at the empty air for support. He would have gone sprawling upon his back if Wine had not been directly in the way. As it was, he struck the other, the force of his big body hurling the smaller man heavily against the ledge of the outer window.

As the fellow struck, the glass shattered and crashed into a thousand pieces, but before Waldron could regain firm footing, or realize what had happened, I was again upon him, breaking through his dazed guard and driving my fists straight into his face.

The revolver in Wine's hand was discharged, the bullet whistling past me, but even as the report cracked, the pressure of the Jew's body forced the smaller man relentlessly backward over the sill. He gave utterance to one wild yell of fright, releasing the gun and gripping desperately at Waldron's collar for support, then toppled over backward and went down.

We both heard the crash as the splinters of glass gave way, and the dull, dead thud of the body as it struck somewhere far below. The Russian seemed paralyzed with terror, unable to quite comprehend what had occurred behind him. But I had seen the tragedy, and my mind worked like a flash. He made one weak effort to spring aside, forgetful of his own danger, his guard dropped, and I let him have it—straight in the jaw. The clenched fist crunched into his whiskers, and, with arms flung up, he went over as if shot, his head striking an edge of the overturned bookcase as he fell, and lay there motionless, a trickle of blood slowly oozing out upon the floor.

I stepped back and leaned out through the broken window; three stories below, on a graveled roof, lay something black, huddled up grotesquely, which I knew was a human body, crushed helpless, its bones broken. I drew back from the gruesome sight, so sleepless I reeled dizzily, clenching at the sill for support. As I clung there, uncertain, dazed, my mind for the moment a blank, some one began rattling and pounding against the door leading into the corridor.

I crossed the room, my limbs trembling so I could scarcely walk, my breath coming in gasps. They were kicking against the wood and pounding with fists, seeking to break in the lock. The sight goaded me, brought back my self-control and I threw the door open and faced them almost coolly. There were four policemen, the first a gray-mustached sergeant, revolver in hand, and behind these a jam of excited individuals of both sexes, peering over shoulders to gain view within. The sergeant gripped me by the collar. "Now, you, what's up here? Have you killed somebody?"

"No," I answered, making no effort to break away, still breathing hard, but able to express myself clearly. "There is a man dead, but he fell from a window. I have nothing to conceal, sergeant. My name is Severn, and I am connected with the United States consular service. Give me a chance and I'll hand you my card."

He must have been impressed by the way I acted and spoke, for he released his grasp and accepted this card: a faded out of a vest pocket, holding it up to the light in order to read the script.

GENTLE TAP OF FAN FATAL DIDN'T IMPRESS THE COURT

Man Dreaming of the Days of the Guillotine Died When His Wife Touched His Neck.

Just a Possibility That Motorist Laid Flat on a Little Bit Too Thick.

Arthur MacLaughlin of Detroit is responsible for this story sent me by my friend, Leo D. Brown, of the Cosmopolitan Book corporation:

"A fello went mad, on a Saturday night, become very much absorbed in 'The Tale of Two Cities.' Particularly was he impressed with the description of the guillotine and the misfortunes upon whose necks it descended so devastatingly. The vision preyed upon his imagination."

"Next day his wife insisted that he accompany her to church. He drowsed during an inordinately long prayer and dreamed that the guillotine was about to descend on his bent neck. Wife, upon resuming her seat when the prayer was over, noticed that her husband was asleep and still leaning forward, his head resting on his hands on the pew ahead. And so, with her fan, she tapped him lightly upon the back of the neck. Whereupon the gent fell dead."

"What a fearful lesson for wives!—W. O. T. in the Philadelphia Public Ledger."

Crepes Hangar.

"Did you call on poor Bibles at the hospital and cheer him up?"

"I called," said the useless man, "but I don't think I cheered him up."

"What was the matter?"

"I'm no good at carrying on a conversation in a sick room. Being at a loss for something to say, I remarked that a real estate firm was advertising a bargain sale of cemetery lots."

It has to be admitted that concealed people are often as valuable to society as modest ones.

A Difference.

When Representative Cole of Iowa was sworn in to succeed James W. Good, who resigned, he was the first new man to come from his district in fourteen years. He said when he took oath of office he recalled a sheriff friend of his who was elected to office and told the judge who was to swear him in that he didn't know why he had been elected, but would like the judge to qualify him.

"I can swear you all right," said the judge, "but God Almighty alone can qualify you."

Will your "Good Morning" last all day?

Easy to start from the breakfast table with zest and enthusiasm, but how easy is it to keep on? Does ambition last, or lag, as the day develops?

The afternoon "slump" is a factor to be counted upon, in business or social life.

Usually, there's a reason.

Nerves whipped by tea or coffee won't keep on running, and they won't stand constant whipping.

Many a man or woman who has wished the afternoon would be as bright as the morning has simply been wishing that the nerves wouldn't have to pay the natural penalty for being whipped with the caffeine drug.

Postum gives a breakfast cup of comfort and cheer, without any penalties afterward. There's no "letting down" from Postum—no midday drowsiness to make up for midnight wakefulness; no headaches; no nervous indigestion; no increase of blood pressure.

Think it over. There's full satisfaction in Postum—a cup of comfort for anybody (the children included), any time.

You can get Postum from your grocer or your waiter today, and probably you'll begin to have better tomorrows, as so many thousands have had, who have made the change from coffee to Postum.

Postum comes in two forms: Instant Postum (in time) made instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water; or Postum Cereal (in packages of larger bulk, for those who prefer to make the drink while the meal is being prepared) made by boiling for 20 minutes. Sold by all grocers.

Methodist Episcopal Church News

SUNDAY SERVICES:

Sunday School	9:45
Morning Service	11:00
Epworth League	7:00
Evening Service	7:45

Every member of the church is urged to be at the church this (Thursday) evening at 7 o'clock. Note the change from 7:30 to 7. It is a vitally important meeting, having to do with extension work, which is the very foundation of the success of the church in this community.

The coming Sunday morning the service is to be given to the fascinating book, John Wesley, Jr. This is the Epworth league study book and the Epworth league here is studying it new for eight Sunday evenings. The book is so good and so interesting that it has been felt that the older ones of the church cannot afford to miss getting something of it. Its presentation in the morning service this coming Sunday will also be of much help to the leaguers in getting a firmer grasp on the great points of the book.

The evening service the coming Sunday will consider the very vital subject "The Truth About Salvation." The purpose will be to help in clearing up the confusion, uncertainty, misunderstanding and misinformation about what salvation means and what is required to attain it.

The church is working toward a larger attendance in the evening service. The leaders of the church at large are thoroughly convinced that the movement of recent years among so many people of good health toward absenting themselves from the evening service, cannot be traced to any other influence than the influence of Satan, and accordingly are setting themselves and mobilizing the forces of the church to combat this device of Satan to rob God's people of just so much of strength which they so greatly need for the Christian life of the week. It is hoped to bring back quickly the better days when people who are able-bodied will be in the evening service just as regularly as in the morning service. A mixed quartet will sing at the evening service the coming Sunday.

Last Sunday morning was celebrated the Lord's supper, commemorating the suffering and death of Christ for the forgiveness of sins. The depths of the reality of His suffering and death to pay the penalty of the guilt of each one was vividly, though briefly, portrayed, and the goodly congregation, with the humble heartache of real penitence, knelt at the altar and tasted the broken bread and drank of the cup in token of their trust in Christ's atoning sacrifice alone for the forgiveness of their sins and for deliverance from the power of Satan.

The evening service last Sunday dealt with "The Death of the Soul." It was shown that Christ and His apostles clearly and repeatedly declared that sin is a reality so terrible that it inoculates every one of its victims with the seeds of spiritual death; that every one living in sin is daily undergoing the frightful process of the atrophy and dying of all good and all capacity for good, and so, with it, the death of all happiness and all capacity for happiness; that this process will be completed much sooner than many suppose; that when this process is completed, nothing is left for that soul but the irrevocable doom to the vast, awful, bottomless tragedy of frightful eternity of indescribable misery, which Christ and His apostles called hell. A passionate appeal was made to all present to throw themselves into intense effort and mighty prayer to rescue the lost in and around Antioch from such an awful doom.

Signers of Declaration.

The Declaration of Independence was signed by every member of the Continental Congress that made it. There were three signers from New Hampshire, five from Massachusetts, two from Rhode Island, four from Connecticut, four from New York, five from New Jersey, three from Delaware, nine from Pennsylvania, four from Maryland, seven from Virginia, three from North Carolina, four from South Carolina and three from Georgia.

"Laughing Gas."

This gas is made by heating solid ammonium nitrate in a flask. The reaction produces water and nitrous oxide. It is the safest anesthetic known to medical science, but occasional fatalities have resulted from its use. DADDY THE DAIRY

PLAN OF BULL ASSOCIATIONS

Modifications of Ideas Suggested by Dairy Division Have Been Tried and Fizzled.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Modifications of the bull-association plan advocated by the dairy division of the United States Department of Agriculture are tried frequently. Most of these plans consist of loose agreements between two or more breeders. In some cases a bull is purchased by a group of men. Sometimes two or more breeders exchange their bulls. The idea in this case is to do close inbreeding, and yet avoid inbreeding.

A specialist of the department who has had extensive opportunity to observe the working of most of these methods, when asked about their success, replied that some of them would give excellent results if carried out, but it was generally impossible to get them to function, for lack of the driving power and balancing influences that are found in the regular bull association.

By Breeding to Superior Sires Milk Production Can Be Greatly Increased in Single Generation and Greater Economy Effected.

"These ideas," he said, "are all right, but they have no working agreements nor plans of procedure to properly regulate their operation. The experience of the department is that such attempts are useless for general adoption, unless organized in a practical, definite, businesslike way by a person of experience who can break down the prejudices of individuals. When such a person undertakes the organization of a co-operative breeding enterprise in a given locality, he generally finds it easier and more beneficial to form a regular co-operative bull association than a partnership of the type indicated.

"When attempts are made to organize a bull association it is nearly always the case that most farmers agree readily on general principles, that the plan is excellent for the other fellow, but no so good for himself. It is necessary to have a community thoroughly interested in the plan, and familiar with its method of operation. Some leader must bring these things about, and it is most unusual if anyone other than an extension specialist will do this work. Even a partnership of two men is frequently found to meet with the same difficulty.

"After a properly organized association has been perfected, it has in it the necessary conditions for permanence. Yet a directing supervision is necessary to its fullest success, and this can best be given by the regular extension organization of the department co-operating with the state agricultural colleges, and the amount of help that can be rendered will depend on how well the form of organization fits in with the other work of the extension forces.

"The plan of action embodied in the regular form of co-operative bull association is a plan approved by experience. It does better than any other plan in use. It has been tried, and it works. Some sort of co-operation for the maintenance of better sires is essential to the fullest development of the dairy industry, and I should advise any who are interested to stay with the regular association plan and carry it through without compromise."

WARMED WATER HELPS COWS

Cattle That Must Drink Ice Cold Water Show Result in Their Milk-Giving Qualities.

Have you ever experimented with warmed water for cows? Of course water should not be very warm, but it should have the chill taken out of it. Dairy cattle that must drink ice cold water show the result in their milk-giving qualities. Ice cold water chills the animal so that additional food is necessary.

"When Greek Meets Greek." The expression "When Greek meets Greek," slightly altered, is derived from the line, "When Greeks joined Greeks, then was the tug of war." The quotation is from the drama of "Alexander the Great," by Nathaniel Lee (1655-1692), and refers to the stubborn resistance offered by the cities of Greece to Philip and Alexander of Macedon.

Home Town Helps

TURNING TO HOME BUILDING

Gratifying Increase in Construction Noted in Practically All Parts of the Country.

It is gratifying to read with what vigor and energy Americans are building homes for themselves. During the war and for a time after it few private homes were built, but now the country is making up for lost time. In the ten months of this year ending October 31, more than $600,000,000 worth of houses were built, and before the year is ended the value of newly constructed buildings will be above $722,000,000. Doubtless will help the nation to bring about better conditions. Men who own houses always are good citizens; they feel of more importance in the land, and no man on earth will fight harder for anything than will the person who battles to protect the roof that covers himself and family. It is believed that 1922 will be the banner year in the putting up of houses; perhaps their total value will reach the billion mark. Then will come the cheaper rents; landlords no longer will go about building and hazing tenants, but rather will they be offering—as of old—a month of free rent to those who will lease their apartments.—New York Morning Telegraph.

Village Has No Poor.

Stony Bottom, W. Va., a village of forty-two families, challenges the world for the honor as the most modest and contented town.

There are just thirty-five families with an average of four persons each in the village who own their own homes and seven other families who pay the landlord for their dwellings.

Of the thirty-five home owners but one has an encumbrance on his property, and that is small and will be cleared off within sixty days. A fine undenominational church counts every resident of the town as a member. There are no poor people in Stony Bottom, neither are there any who can claim to be rich. None is in debt. Twelve automobiles are owned by residents of the village. Everybody appears happy and contented with life.—Exchange.

"Holding Together."

In the preface to "The Glass of Fashion," reference is made to a letter written by the artist, Burne-Jones, to Mary Gladstone. This idealist broke forth into lamentation over the quarrels and trivial animosities which too often exist between men of genius. "My dear," he exclaims, "if twelve of these men would hold together for ten years, the whole world aspect would now be changed, and twelve men did once hold together and the whole face of the world was changed."

Why cannot this wise comment be applied to the existing groups in our city and villages—i. e., to its churches, its schools, its lodges, its clubs and what not? How great would be the good to individual and community! The very fact of communities "holding together" would itself be the millennium.—Correspondence Chicago Daily News.

How They Hold a Funeral of a Town

A town that never has anything to do in a public way is on the way to the cemetery. Any citizen who will do nothing for his town is helping to dig its grave. A man that "cusses" the town furnishes the coffin. The man who is so selfish as to have no time from his business to give affairs is making the shroud. The man who will not advertise is driving the hearse. The man who is always pulling back from any public enterprise throws bouquets on the grave. The man who is so stingy as to be howling hard times, preaches the funeral and sings the doxology. And thus the town lies buried from all the sorrow of the world.

Getting Square

A printer received an inquiry from a doctor asking for a quotation on one thousand letterheads, several different sizes were wanted in an assortment of colors. Request was also made that the type form be kept standing in case more letterheads were wanted at a later date.

This aroused the printer's ire and taking his typewriter in hand he wrote the doctor as follows:

"I am open for bids on one operation for appendicitis, with and without ether, two, three and five-inch incisions. The successful bidder is to leave the incision open as I may be in the market for a gallstone operation in a few months, and wish to save the expense of extra cutting."

Chinese Villages of 100,000.

The distribution of the population of China is a curious thing to contemplate. A hundred thousand people may be gathered together within what might rightly be regarded as city limits, but on the map their city will be indicated as a mere village that is not worth considering. Moreover, they will not have established a single feature of city organization. Villages of 100,000 inhabitants are rather difficult to visualize, but they exist in China.—Eleanor Franklin Egan in the Saturday Evening Post.

The Soya Bean.

The soya bean is largely used by the Chinese. The white cheeses you see at Chinese stores are made of soya bean curd. In France, a liquid made from the soya bean has been used as a milk substitute. It is not good for that purpose, because, like all beans, it is largely starch. The soya bean is a valuable food, but it is inferior to peanuts. They contain much fat, which beans lack.

Rand-McNally Issues New

Map of Chicago, Suburbs

Both realtors and others should know when there's a new map of Chicago published, for it's a rare occurrence. Rand-McNally has just issued a new "Official Map of Chicago and Suburbs," drawn on a scale of two inches to the mile, 46x64 inches. In one corner, drawn on a larger scale, is an auxiliary map covering the section bounded by Halstead, Illinois, and 13th, giving practically all business blocks, warehouses, theatres, hotels, etc. This latter map also is published separately.

The Affix Wick.

The affix wick, also written wick, is a form of the Anglo-Saxon word, wic, which means the same as the Latin word, vicus, and the modern English word, village. It is used as part of a place-name, although many of the places that bear it are no longer villages, so that today it may be said not only to indicate a village but a town as well, or a municipal or political district. The two forms of the affix are illustrated in two well-known place-names, Berwick and Greenwich.

Poetry and Reality.

It is one of the misfortunes of progress that the tomb of Lalla Rookh is not in Kashmir vale, by "the crystal pools of Shalimar," but close to one of the rattling little railroads that are modernizing Hindustan. Difference in Greetings.

About a hundred years ago there was an English duke who used to return home at daylight after a night's gambling at his club. There were only two persons stirring in that part of London at that hour—the duke and a cobbler commencing his day's work. They always greeted each other. "Good night, friend," said the duke. "Good morning, sir," said the cobbler.

DAIRY

DAIRY CATTLE ON DRY FARM

Government Begins Study of Dairying and Crop Possibilities in Southwest.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
In order to study the possibilities of dairying and to develop better methods of crop utilization in the dry farming regions of the Southwest, the bureau of animal industry of the United States Department of Agriculture has established a herd of purebred dairy cattle on a farm in the semi-arid district of northwestern Oklahoma. The bureau of plant industry has had a farm here near the town of Woodward for many years, and has studied such crops as grain sorghums, broom corn, forage sorghums, cowpeas, alfalfa, rye for the prevention of soil blowing, and winter wheat for pasture. From now on the farm will be used co-operatively by the bureau of plant industry and the bureau of animal industry. This is considered a necessary combination, as most of the feeds grown there are of the kind that must be fed largely to live stock.

The dairy division hopes to determine whether or not it is desirable to produce live stock under those dryland conditions, and to grow the crops which will give the largest returns per acre in terms of milk or cream. The question is not one of crop tonnage, but of the amount of finished dairy products that can be turned out. The work here is not designed to discover the best practices for any particular state, but to study practices that will be desirable in the large dryland regions where only certain crops can be grown.

The people of this little Oklahoma town have shown great enthusiasm in regard to the investigations that the department of agriculture contemplates. The town purchased 160 acres adjoining the old government farm, and turned it over free to the government for a period of 99 years. The owners of the town were almost unanimous in favor of this donation.

The cattle that are being used on this farm are also in the country-wide breeding project being conducted by the dairy division and bulls have been sent from the government farm at Beltsville, Md. In this breeding project, which now includes more than 300 cows and 70 bulls, it is hoped to determine what are the best methods of breeding for the improvement of cattle. The large scale of this investigation should make the results particularly valuable.

CLEAN ALL DAIRY UTENSILS

Where Several Cows Are Kept Water May Be Heated by Means of Small Boiler.

One of the greatest conveniences on the farm where cows are kept is some means for heating an abundance of water for washing the milk vessels. Where a considerable number of cows is kept, heating water by means of steam from a small, low-pressure, upright boiler is desirable, but on the small farm a stove with a basin fitted into the top (or it may be separate from the top) can be purchased cheaply and will serve the purpose, provided the water is properly heated. Water can be pumped from the well directly into the basin. In order to avoid heating the milk room and to do away with smoke and ashes, the water heater should be placed immediately outside of the milk room; and, if elevated, the water from it can be run into the washing vat.

PRUNE APPLE TREE PROPERLY

Orchardists Should Take Care Not to Cut a Hole in Top—Too Much Wood Taken Out.

In working on apple trees be careful not to cut a hole in the treetop. Many people read about opening up the center of the tree in order to let sunlight in and then make the mistake of cutting out too much wood. A tree properly pruned should never show where the limbs come from when viewed at a distance of 25 feet.

PREVENT LOSSES IN SHIPPING HAY

Invoices Should Precede Car and Contain Full Details Concerning Consignment.

FOLLOW INSTRUCTIONS GIVEN

Exact Weight of Hay and Number of Bales in Car Should Be Stated on Bill of Lading, Together With Its Grade.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Careless and inaccurate billing or invoicing are responsible for much of the delay and losses experienced by hay shippers, says the bureau of markets and crop estimates, United States Department of Agriculture. Accordingly the bureau has prepared the following suggestions that apply to the shipment of grain as well as hay:

Follow billing instructions in detail, naming route and delivery road when requested.

Forward bills of lading and invoices promptly.

Prepare invoices carefully, stating car initial and number, date of shipment, number of bales, total weight of car, or of each particular kind or grade, and price data when available.

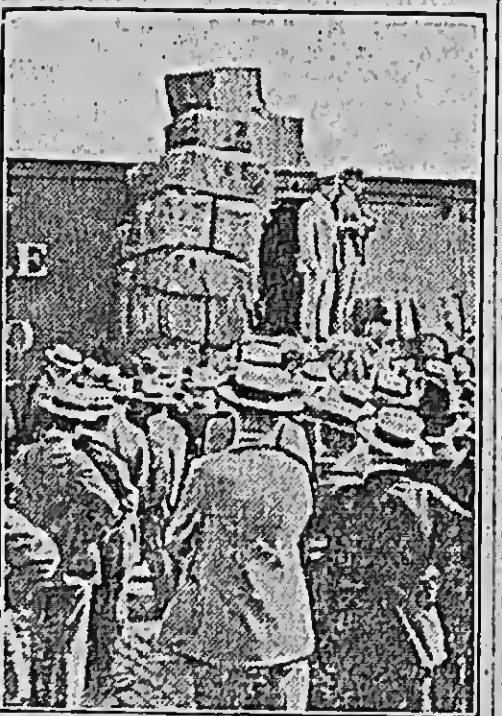

Follow instructions closely.

If the billing instructions furnished by the consignee are not clear, it is generally a better plan to hold the shipment until satisfactory instructions are received than to take the chance of billing it incorrectly. When specific instructions as to routing or delivery are given they should be followed in detail, as it is frequently the case that shipments arriving over roads other than those specified must be switched at considerable cost before delivery can be made at the desired location. In many markets hay shipments arriving in certain railroad yards will not sell as advantageously as when they arrive in other yards because of unfavorable switching facilities or because of the distance of the yards from buyer's warehouses. Commission merchants and dealers in the markets are familiar with these factors and, when possible, request billing that will not subject their hay shipments to these handicaps.

Buyers may also desire to reconsider their hay upon arrival or change the billing while the car is in transit; but if the hay is shipped via another line from which they cannot reconsider the shipment, they may suffer a considerable loss which can be charged back to the shipper, if he has not followed shipping instructions.

Forward Bill of Lading Promptly.

When the bill of lading has been signed by the railroad agent it should be forwarded promptly to the consignee, unless it is desired to attach a draft to it, in which case it should be placed in the bank for transmittal to the consignee at the earliest possible moment.

Selling Hay at Terminal Market.

When cars are shipped only a short distance, and especially if billed to shipper's orders, the bill should be directed to forward the draft and bill of lading direct to consignee's bank, if known; otherwise to a bank in his town. If this precaution is not taken the bank may follow its usual custom of sending the documents through the regular channel of corresponding banks, which may delay delivery to the consignee until after the car of hay has arrived and been placed on downgrade.

In addition to careful and accurate routing of the shipment, the exact weight of the hay and the number of bales loaded into the car should be stated on the bill of lading, and it is also a good practice to state the kind and grade of hay comprising the shipment.

Making the Invoice.

When a car of hay is consigned to a dealer in a distant market a letter to him stating that a car of hay is being shipped is not sufficient information upon which he can arrange to the best advantage for its arrival and sale. Whether a car is consigned or has been sold on truck or to arrive, a carefully prepared invoice should be sent the consignee at the time the car is shipped. Such an invoice should show the car initial and number and date of shipment. Also the kind and quality of hay, together with the number of bales and the total weight. If two or more distinct kinds or grades have been loaded, the number of bales and the total weight of each kind or grade should also be shown.

Home Town Helps

ALL BENEFITED BY ZONING

Minnesota Newspaper Points Out the Advantages of Farsighted and Comprehensive Plans.

The prosperity of a city depends much on how it is built. It is always an advantage to a city to draw to it those well able to support themselves, because they become supporters of the city and pay their share of the taxes. The amount of taxes that newcomers can provide is enormous. By paying attention to the proper points in city building, the city establishes the very thing that brings this population without cost to itself.

Cities grow by natural means sometimes. A water power may develop a large city, but the city itself may be built in a clumsy way and without beauty. One factor in city building is arrangement. This is why zone laws are proposed so that a home builder of any class may feel sure that his surroundings will not be spoiled by the invasion of unsightly things that are wholly unnecessary.

The best good of a city should prevail over the more selfish desire of some property owner to make money regardless of his neighbor. There is just as much chance to make money under the zoning law, however, as there is without it, and even a greater one.

VALUE OF PROPER PLANNING

Fundamental Business Idea in Looking to the Future Development of the Community.

Town and city planning do not find their value in developing the esthetic side alone, but also apply the sound business fundamentals of maintenance and improvement to the community. declared B. Loring Young, speaker of the Massachusetts house of representatives, in an address at the eighth annual conference of the Massachusetts Federation of Planning Boards. By directing proper provision of water supply, sewage disposal, housing facilities, adequate municipal buildings and local forest reserve, he said, they work to the enhancement of citizenship in its relation to the community, the state and the nation.

As an opening to the conference, citizens of Winchester acted as hosts to the members of the federation on a motor trip of inspection of the many developments of the town which make it pre-eminent among communities where town planning has been carefully and intelligently applied. The first evidences of this were a large playground, and park, a red-lighted stream and an attractive bridge which have replaced unsightly tanneries and tenements and permit an unrestricted view of the community center.

Home Ownership Best

Aside from the security which the home owner enjoys, the possession of his own home should be the ambition of every man. Naturally the first step is the most difficult, for the purchase of a home means a cash payment that is usually well beyond the $1,000 mark. Once that hurdle is taken, however, the other payments are easy, for they should not exceed, at the outside, $75 a month on the kind of a home the average man can afford. When the current business depression, with its deplorable unemployment situation, goes by the boards I believe many more Americans will see the wisdom of owning their own homes and thus increasing the percentage of our people who are free from the clutches of the landlord.—Washington Post.

To Hurry the Zoning

The Chicago zoning act should be put into effect as quickly as possible. Many a beautiful residence neighborhood has been ruined by the steady encroachment of factories, coal yards and the like, and the sooner the city is zoned the sooner this stupendous loss will be eliminated. It would also be a positive assurance to a man building or buying a home that his property will not lose value through the introduction of low-class improvements, and will also tend to stabilize real estate loans as well as reduce fire hazards.—E. C. Ities in Chicago Daily News.

Daily Short Story

Willoughby Vampurs, the sunshine editor, reached his desk prepared to scatter large gobs of sunshine. Then he reached for his plug tobacco.

It was missing.

He was gloomy the rest of the day.

Refused to Vote Bonds

Bradford, Pa., voted against bonding the city for a municipally owned electric plant. A vigorous campaign was waged. In the election municipal ownership was defeated by a vote of 1,700 to 117.

Wise Have Joint Dairies.
Switzerland has many co-operative cattle associations, besides joint stock dairies in every village.

Good Man, Good Citizen.
By far the greatest thing a man can do for his city is to be a good man.

National Holidays

Those who dislike work should dwell in Turkey and avoid Scotland for those two countries are at the top and bottom respectively in the list of the countries of the world as regards public holidays. Turkey has 20 official holidays in the year, while thirty Scotland has only five. Italy celebrates 23 general public holidays; Germany, 20; France, 18; Great Britain, 16; Japan, 15; and Portugal, eight.

Phrase First Used by Seward

"The Higher Law" was an expression first used by the Hon. William H. Seward (1801-1872). In his speech in the United States senate on March 31, 1850, on the question of admitting California into the Union. As employed by him on that occasion, the phrase denoted a law higher than the Constitution, viz., a law of God.—Exchange.

of the M. E. Ladies' Aid and was ably directed by Mrs. C. D. Bruel. Arthur Panknin, as Bob Bennett forced to tell the truth and nothing but the truth for a period of twenty-four hours, pleased his audiences immensely with the adroit manner he avoided all the pitfalls laid for his downfall. Lynn Sherman was perfectly at home as E. M. Ralston and gave a very good impersonation of Earl Swenson portrayed the part of Bishop Doran perfectly. Dwains Dowell as Dick Donnelly, a stock broker, was remarkable for the natural ease with which he assumed the role. Charles Bruel as Clarence Van Dusen, a stock broker, gave a very good interpretation of the part. Mrs. J. T. Moran as Gwen, the daughter, whose charitable enterprises caused the development of all the tense situations carried off a difficult role creditably. Mrs. A. Williams as Mrs. Ralston, wife of the financier, gave a very finished and faultless impersonation. Vera Sheulke, as Ethel, a society girl, took her part with ease and assurance. Mrs. N. Strupe as Mabel and Doris Ganzallin as Sabel, chorus girls, carried off difficult parts in a very pleasing manner. Ruby Winnas, Martha the maid, did very well.

Between acts Mildred Pribnow, of Whitewater, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. A. Becker, gave a realistic Gypsy dance and Howard Schultz, of Kenosha, several violin solos. Mr. Schultz was accompanied by Myrtle Westlake.

FARMERS' INSTITUTE HERE PROVIDED FINE PROGRAM

Interesting Talks on Farm Subjects—Fine Local Talent Program

In spite of the numerous programs which were given in the Woodman hall recently, the farmers' institute held on Thursday and Friday was quite well attended.

The talks along the lines of constructive improvement in farming which were given throughout the entire institute were appreciated by the people as was shown by the undivided attention given the speakers.

The talks given by Prof. Hayes, of the University of Wisconsin, were practical and to the point. Prof. Hayes pointed out the value of well constructed, well lighted poultry houses as essential for egg production. He also emphasized the value of following correct principles in feeding.

The talks by Mr. F. Stubbley, of Black Earth, and Mr. Gifford, of Madison, and Mr. Brill of the extension division of the University of Wisconsin were excellent indeed and took well with the audience. Unfortunately Mr. Swartz, one of the best known alfalfa men throughout the state, was unable to be with us due to the death of his mother a few days previous to the institute.

Petitions have been circulated both for an institute to be held at Wilmet again next year, and also a cooking school to be held in connection with the institute. Mr. Stubbley informed the committee before leaving that he was well pleased with results at Wilmet and would recommend an institute for Wilmet next year.

Last Thursday evening a very interesting program was given in the Wilmet hall by the children of various schools in the community. When the thing for the program they responded very graciously. Every member was well selected and well given. The first was a song by Emerson Smallfield, who has a very pleasing and promising voice. The second number was a drill given by the Salem Center school. The little tots looked very pretty and attractive in their fairy-like costumes of gold and silver. Next there was a four act food-play, "How Dick Outclassed Tom," given by some of the Wilmet high school pupils and grammar grades. It brought out some excellent points in the choice of foods, making the play helpful as well as humorous. The rope drill put on by the Silverlake graded school was likewise successful, displaying gracefulness and ease on the part of the children. The dance given by the sunbonnet babies and overall boys of the Wilmet primary room showed simplicity and grace. The little folks acted effectively natural which added to the effectiveness of the dance. The humorous selection, "Seeing Things," was well given by Mildred Bloss. The song, "Carolina Lullaby," was beautifully rendered by Mary Hoffman and Myrtle Carlson, both girls have sweet and charming voices.

The program closed with a talk on our rural schools by Mr. Stubbley. His talk was very instructive. We were pleased to see the large attendance at this splendid and entertaining program.

child was to be brought to a normal standard—or a well child kept well. To the lack of parental control, Mrs. Featherstone ascribes the alarming high percentage of undernourished children in America today. The drift boys were unfit—or a misfit.

To quote the speaker—The American child of two, three and four years of age is the autocrat and tyrant of the home and is so blamed busy running the home that he has no time for any thing else. He dictates what he shall have to eat and gets it. He sleeps or not according to his ability to hold out. He runs and plays until he is too tired to rest or sleep and is allowed to do so. Teeth and tonsils are cared for or not according to whether he is willing or not. By the time he is six years old and should be ready to enter school the teacher finds him below weight, pale, listless, dull, or nervous exceptable, easily fatigued, incapable of carrying on easily—as he should be—the normal child's program of work and play and at the same time maintaining proper physical development. The mother should first know food values as related to a growing child and then see that such food is eaten regardless of "I don't like that old stuff—I won't eat it, etc." on the part of her child. Every mother should be capable of sending that child to bed

—there to remain until hunger compels respect for good food of any sort. To bring an undernourished child up to normal there must be co-operation on the part of parent, child, teacher and the doctor. When these four combine to accomplish the above result the worst case of undernourishment can be cured.

No one who heard Mrs. Featherstone's vigorous common sense address could fail to resolve to do better things so well know yet so seldom do. The address was an inspiration and the club is to be congratulated for its success in securing her for a second time. Who knows but that the weight and measurement system may be installed in the High School as a result of this lecture?
